The Defense Program

THE NATION'S RESOURCES

(Editor's Note: The ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL requested the Honorable Harold Ickes, Secretary of the Interior, to contribute an article on the part this Department is playing in the national defense program. In response to this request, Secretary Ickes has written the following.)

BY HON. HAROLD L. ICKES
Secretary, Department of the Interior

It would be difficult to imagine the plight of a nation in an international crisis if it had no, or few, basic resources.

Consider what our situation would be if we had little coal, no great supply of lumber, only a few minerals, not much power, and a paucity of petroleum. Without an abundance of resources it would be virtually impossible to manufacture quantities of tanks, guns, planes, munitions, ships, and other material necessary for successful national defense.

Fortunately, we have the resources. With the exception of a few strategic and critical minerals, the United States possesses the basic raw materials necessary for modern industry and, consequently, for national defense. Our chief problem is not supplies, but coordination and protection.

The Department of the Interior plays a fundamental role in national defense. The work of the Department is almost entirely devoted to the appraisal, discovery, management and conservation of the Nation's resources. One of the functions of the Bureau of Mines, for example, is to develop new and improved methods of extracting petroleum. The Bureau also has control of all the helium in the world. It supplies helium to the Army and Navy for lighter than air craft. The 1939 helium production was 9,000,000 cubic feet, but in an emergency 24,000,000 cubic feet can be produced. The Bureau explores better methods of refining and transporting petroleum and its products. It has already achieved success in the production of gasoline from low-grade coal. The Bureau is developing new alloys and metals, and seeking to improve the production of metals in general. The Bureau of Mines works in harmony with the Geological Survey, another Interior Department division, in assembling data on the location, character and extent of mineral deposits in this country. These two agencies are now exploring and opening up deposits of strategic minerals. The Bituminous Coal Division is likewise in the Department of the Interior. In this connection it should be pointed out that the United States has a stupendous coal reserve of more than three trillion tons.

Interior is likewise the chief national agency in the building and production of hydro-electric power, as well as dams for irrigation. The Bureau of Reclamation, for instance, now operates 145 dams, about two dozen of which are power producing ones. Among the latter are Grand Coulee and Boulder, two of the largest man-made structures on earth. Ten other dams are under construction. These great dams with their enormous power output are opening new areas for food supply and new resources. The Bonneville Adminis-

Creation of New Arm Foreseen as Infantry Tanks and Cavalry Mechanization are United

The most far reaching change in Army organization since the World War was taken this week in the separation from the Infantry and Cavalry of their tank and mechanized elements and incorporation of them into an Armored Corps of two Divisions.

Besides the importance of this creation of an Armored Field Force as a fighting unit, is the significance of the fact that responsibility for the maintenance, training and development of all tanks and mechanization has been withdrawn from the Chiefs of Infantry and Cavalry and placed under the direction of the newly appointed Armored Field Force Commander, Brig. Gen. Adna R. Chaffee, USA, formerly commander of the 7th Cavalry Brigade (Mechanized).

Thus, for the time being at least, the development of armored fighters is an independent field function reporting directly to the Chief of Staff on somewhat the same basis as the GHQ Air Force was until its recent return to the Chief of the Air Corps for administrative purposes. While the new Armored Field Force will be neither Infantry nor Cavalry, the personnel, for the present, will retain their identity as individual Infantry and Cavalry officers and enlisted men. There is strong possibility, however, that the development will lead to a new branch or arm probably to be known as the Armored Corps.

It will be recalled that during the World War General John J. Pershing created a Tank Corps as a separate element and that following the War many leaders, including Brig. Gen. Samuel D. Rockenbach, now retired, advocated its Six years ago, before "Blitzkrieg" was the word for it, this insignia was adopted for Mechanized Cavalry. Now it becomes the insignia for the new Armored Field Force. The tracks, showing mechanization, are black, as is the cannon indicating fire power. The fork of lightning, symbolizing its swift powers of destruction, is red. The circular background is in the color of the wearer's arm or service—yellow for Cavalry red for Field Artillery, etc. The insignia is worn high on the left sleeve.

retention as a new arm. However, in the drafting of the National Defense Act the development of tanks was made a function of the Infantry. Later, when General Douglas MacArthur was chief of staff, experiments which had proceeded with motorized Infantry were expanded and a

69 New Ships Started

During this past week orders were placed with Navy Yards and contracts negotiated with private builders for 69 combatant vessels, bringing the total number of vessels started by the Navy during the past three weeks to 92, and putting work underway on all construction now authorized by Congress for which funds were appropriated.

Total tonnage involved in the program is 499,435, and estimated cost is $1,140,000,000.

The orders were placed in three groups.

On 28 June, orders were placed with Navy Yards for construction of nine submarines and ten destroyers, as follows: Portsmouth, N. H., 5 submarines; Mare Island, 4 submarines; Boston, 5 destroyers; Charleston, 3 destroyers, and Puget Sound, 2 destroyers.

On 1 July, negotiated contracts were placed for eleven cruisers, 20 destroyers, 13 submarines and one large seaplane tender (the last vessel under the regular 1941 program). Electric Boat Company will build the 13 submarines at $2,795,000 each. Bethlehem Steel Company will construct 4 cruisers at $23,618,000 each, 4 cruisers at $18,573,000 each, 2 destroyers at $5,977,000 each, and 2 destroyers at

Reserve Officers for ROTC Duty

Corps Area Commanders of the Army have been instructed to select Reserve Officers under their jurisdiction to replace 350 regular Army officers now on duty with the senior divisions ROTC, Acting Secretary of War Johnson announced yesterday. Regulars are needed for duty with the expanding Regular Army.

The Reserve officers to replace the Regulars will be first and second lieutenants where practicable with preference given to reserves who have recently had a minimum of six months active duty training. Where an individual officer is desired by school authorities Reservists in the grade of captain may be detailed.

A portion of the ROTC vacancies may be filled by Retired regular Army officers who will be called to active duty at the request of the school authorities, subject to approval by the Corps Area commanders.

Camp Perry Matches Postponed

Because of the four Army Maneuvers scheduled for August, the annual National Rifle and Pistol Matches at Camp Perry, Ohio, will be postponed from 18 Aug. to 1 Sept. Originally scheduled to close 7 Sept., they will now run until 21 Sept.

Army's New Housing Policy Stresses Speed

Acting Secretary of War Louis Johnson, announced on 2 July that the War Department contemplates suspension of future permanent construction projects for increased Army garrisons in the continental United States, except where temporary construction will not suffice or is obviously impracticable. Urgent requirements of facilities for manufacturing, storage and supply depots, and communication and utility systems will be considered for accomplishment by permanent or semi-permanent construction. The War Department will determine the specific projects of new permanent construction which will be built after study of each specific recommendation.

The expansion of the Army incident to the present emergency necessitates the construction of housing and additional facilities at posts, camps, and stations in the minimum time. To accomplish this, the following policies have been announced by the War Department.

"a. Mobilization type temporary construction will be provided at posts, camps, and stations where additional Regular Army troops are assigned as soon as the requirements are determined and funds become available. Wherever new units are activated, or a material increase in the tactical units of a garrison is authorized, action towards furnishing additional accommodations will be initiated by the War Department. For garrisons receiving small increases in service detachments and where such increases exceed the maximum barrack capacity, requests for additional accommodations will be initiated by Corps Area and exempted commanders concerned.

"b. The maximum use will be made of all existing permanent and temporary shelter. For additional shelter, the War Department plans to provide housing where practicable on the basis of 125-man unit, consisting of two barracks (63-man capacity with inside lavatories), one mess hall, one recreation building, and one supply building, and such facilities as will make them habitable. A variation of this for larger units; such as, a 250-man mess hall or extension of smaller mess hall, and addition of 63-man units of barracks may be provided where necessary.

"c. The construction of family quarters for married officers and noncommissioned officers is suspended for the time being. Officers whose presence at the station is required and who cannot be accommodated in existing quarters, will be housed in mobilization type bachelor officer quarters and mess buildings.

"d. The construction of stables is not contemplated. Housing for animals, where required, will be provided by the construction of motor sheds in lieu of stables. The interiors will be so modified as to provide the necessary fittings for the care of animals without altering the structural strength of the building.

"e. At permanent Regular Army stations where additional hospitalization is required, permanent barracks will be used for wards, supplemented by the construction of such temporary clinical and

Press Debates Giving President Power to Order Out the National Guard

Editors divided sharply on President Roosevelt's request for authority to order out the National Guard, just as sharply as the House Military Affairs Committee which approved the request with the limitation that National Guardsmen should not be used outside of the United States and its possessions. Some typical comments follow:

"One of the reasons given for the President's request for authority to call out the National Guardsmen is that those troops might be needed to take the place of Regulars sent to Latin American scenes of disorder," comments the Indianapolis, Ind., Star.

"The difficulty might come in the more loosely organized and smaller republics. It is possible that revolutions might be launched under one guise or another and make serious complications for us. It certainly would be foolish for us not to be on the lookout and to take steps to forestall trouble."

Declares the Woonsocket, R. I., Call, "Army brass hats in Washington and elsewhere, talking off the record, evince small enthusiasm for the President's idea of calling out the National Guard. They'd much rather have the Regular Army expanded and keep the militia on tap as a last resort..."

"Nevertheless, they favor the President's request for authority to send the National Guard, if necessary, beyond the United States borders. The idea is to use it, in an emergency, to replace troops sent to a troubled area from the Canal Zone or Puerto Rico."

"It is disturbing," observes the Charleston, S. C., Post, "to have to consider that an emergency might arise which would make necessary the national use of our citizen-soldiers. Nevertheless the emergency possibility must be considered and no important measure of preparedness can be overlooked in times such as now confront the world."

Stating that it is quite possible that the National Guard might have to be sent out of the United States in defense of the principles of the Monroe Doctrine, the Grand Rapids, Mich., Herald warns nevertheless, "The Congress should be extremely cautious about giving the President all this power. It will do well to remain in session to keep a tight rein on Mr. Roosevelt who is committed so far as he is personally concerned to enter this country into the war; and, at the same time, to have its say when and if the time comes that the President may think it necessary or desirable to send American forces beyond the borders of our own Nation."

But comments the Grand Rapids, Mich., Press, "Under clear analysis the fears of the oppositionists do not seem to stand up. Those fears go so far as to state that power to mobilize the Guard would be used as a means of plunging the country into conflict by adventures in Latin-America or elsewhere. Yet the President has the authority to control the movement of the Regular Army and if he desires to use it for policing South America, authority to call out the Guard, or lack of it, would not be likely to alter his decision."

The San Francisco, Examiner, says, "Is it not also an obligation of Congress to weigh all possibilities before acting in accordance with the President's desires?"

"Among the very serious possibilities which Congress must consider is that the President, having the extraordinary power of mobilization, might misjudge some future emergency and decide to send the militia out of the country on a warlike mission when it was not the wish of the American people to do so and when the actual necessity did not exist..."

"When it becomes his judgment that war is necessary either in this hemisphere or elsewhere, it is well to have his judgment appraised and passed on by Congress—which is the only way we have of sharing decision on such vital matters with the people."

"We think that Congress should not adjourn now but should stay on the job," says the Sheridan, Wyo., Press. "But if it is going to adjourn, it seems that it should first give the President that authority. Tremendous things happen appallingly fast these days, and we should be as prepared as we can."

"Full demonstration of readiness," comments the Lansing, Mich., Journal, "would doubtless be of high protective value against attack. Perhaps some fore-handed demonstration is now in order. It is better to warn an aggressor off than to fight him off."

States the Wichita, Kan., Eagle, "Many members of the Congress have insisted upon a clarification of what the President has in mind. They have an idea that the policing of this hemisphere is more or less the Navy's job and that the ground troops should be kept here at home for possible eventualities..."

"It would seem to be America's cue to encourage the Latin nations to do more in their own defense and to rely less on the willingness of the United States to do all the policing chores for them. And if the Latin countries mean to be supine in the face of European fifth column activities, we ought to know about it."

The Portland, Ore., Oregon Journal states, "If additional troops are needed, immediately and in quantity, the National Guard is the only place to reach for them, as Uncle Sam's Regulars have plenty of other chores to do."

"Mechanized Force" not under any arm or service, was organized and trained under Maj. Gen. (then Col.) Daniel Van Voorhis at Ft. Eustis, Va. Following this experimentation and principally as the result of studies and recommendations made by General Chaffee (then a cavalry field officer on the War Department General Staff) it was decided that the missions of this force were Cavalry missions and that the development should be turned over to the Cavalry. Because tanks were Infantry weapons by law, it became necessary to call similar weapons Combat Cars when they were placed under the Cavalry. The development under Cavalry proceeded from a regiment to the proportions of a reinforced brigade and last Fall the Cavalry recommended its expansion to two divisions at once and the organization of two more divisions should the emergency increase. The Department has now decided to combine the Infantry tanks and Cavalry Combat cars as one element, with no distinction between them.

In organizing two Armored Divisions, the Department had the choice of making the Seventh Cavalry Brigade into a Division immediately, which could have been done with a few additions, and organizing a new Armored Division from the Infantry tank concentration at Ft. Benning, Ga. This would have given them one division capable of immediate action and another which would have to go through a period of organization and training as a division. The other was to distribute existing units between two new divisions, using them as leaven, and train two new ones more rapidly than one new one could be built. The latter alternative has been determined upon and outstanding Cavalry and Infantry tank and mechanization experts selected to steer the new organization.

Accordingly cadres from the Cavalry Brigade will be sent to Ft. Benning and cadres of the tanks from Benning will go to Ft. Knox, the Sixth Infantry which has been working with the Mechanized Brigade will be expanded and then split into two parts, one each for Benning and Knox, while the 68th Field Artillery, also a part of the Mechanized brigade, will be likewise expanded and split.

One of the first steps to be taken by General Chaffee will be the setting up of special schools both for officers and enlisted men at Benning and at Knox. General Chaffee has been in Washington for some time working with General George C. Marshall, chief of staff, and with the General Staff on the details of his new Corps. He plans to leave this afternoon, 6 July, by airplane for Ft. Benning where he will go over the situation with the tank officers there and then fly tomorrow to Knox.

The text of the official announcement issued by the War Department follows:

"The Acting Secretary of War, the Honorable Louis Johnson, announced today the organization in the United States Army on an experimental basis, of an Armored Corps of two divisions which will operate under an Armored field force commander. This Corps of two divisions will comprise the armored vehicles heretofore assigned to the Cavalry and to the Infantry, and will include Field Artillery and Motorized Infantry. The decision to combine all such vehicles and organizations into a self-contained force of great striking power has been reached following an analysis of the recent participation of the mechanized Cavalry and Infantry tank units in the extensive corps and army maneuvers held last May in the South, and also as a result of apparent developments in the character and use of mechanized power in Europe.

"Brig. Gen. Adna R. Chaffee, the present Commander of our Mechanized force, will be named as the first commander of this Armored Field Force. His headquarters will remain at Ft. Knox, Ky., the station of the present Mechanized force, the personnel and equipment of which will form part of the new Armored Corps.

"The Commander of the First Armored Division with station at Ft. Knox, will be Brig. Gen. Bruce Magruder, former Commander of the Infantry tanks, and the Second Armored Division, which will be organized at Ft. Benning, Ga., will be commanded by Brig. Gen. Charles L. Scott, recently a Cavalry colonel in command of a mechanized regiment. Lt. Col. Sereno E. Brett will be designated as Chief of Staff of the Armored Corps under General Chaffee. Colonel Brett Commanded tank units in the Meuse-Argonne, and has been one of the outstanding Infantry tank officers.

"The new Armored Corps, comprising the trained personnel of Infantry and Cavalry tank and combat car units, will consist of all Infantry tank components except the 1st Battalion of the 67th Infantry Regiment at Ft. George G. Meade, Md., all mechanized Cavalry components now at Ft. Knox, Ky., and the 1st Combat Car Squadron now stationed at Ft. Riley, Kans. It will contain over 15,000 officers and enlisted men, and each division will be divided into five parts—the Command Echelon, the Reconnaissance Echelon, the Combat Echelon, the Support Echelon, and the Service Echelon.

"Each division will contain approximately 700 armored vehicles, 300 guns and howitzers of various calibers, and over 6,500 automatic and semi-automatic weapons.

"The Command Echelon will consist of the division headquarters and staff with Signal units.

"The Reconnaissance Echelon will be made up of an air corps squadron and a reconnaissance battalion comprising two reconnaissance companies of scout cars, one light tank company, and one motorized rifle company.

"The Combat Echelon, which is the striking force, will function under a brigadier general as part of the division. It will consist of two light armored regiments and one medium armored regiment, a motorized engineer battalion, and an armored field artillery regiment.

"The Support Echelon will consist of a motorized rifle regiment of two battalions to act as a holding force, and a Field Artillery battalion of four batteries of howitzers and anti-tank guns.

"The Service Echelon will be made up of one Ordnance maintenance company, one Quartermaster battalion, and one motorized Medical battalion.

"In addition to this Corps of light and medium tanks, plans contemplate the creation of additional armored organizations as rapidly as materiel and personnel become available. The 1st Battalion of the 67th Infantry Regiment at Ft. George G. Meade, Md., and other units, principally of heavy tanks, to be organized at a later date, will be designated as GHQ Reserve Units. Their maintenance and development will be, for the present, a responsibility of the Armored Field Force Commander.

"The separation from the Cavalry and the Infantry of these mechanized units does not affect in any way the status of the 4th and 6th Regiments of Cavalry, containing many motor elements, which are reconnaissance regiments assigned to Infantry Corps, or of the Mechanized elements of Cavalry and Infantry divisions, and separate regiments."

surgical facilities adjacent thereto as may be necessary. Provisions for hospitalization at camps where no permanent barracks are available will be determined by the War Department.

"f. Additional post facilities, including warehouses, motor repair shops and utility shops will be provided where such facilities are considered essential for the increased garrison. The construction of housing for vehicles is not contemplated at this time.

"g. Pending the construction of temporary facilities at posts, camps, and stations, it may be necessary in some cases to provide tent camps for the augmented garrison. This will be the responsibility of Corps Area or exempted station Commanders.

"h. It is incumbent upon all commanders that economy be exercised in all construction projects. In this connection, it is anticipated that considerable sums of WPA funds will become available in the Fiscal Year 1941. These funds, when available, should be used to the maximum on those structures, which although required, are not immediately essential to housing personnel. They should also be used for grading, drainage, walks, roads, water and electrical systems, parking areas, and other like projects, provided such projects with WPA labor will not delay occupancy of essential structures. The first priority for the allotment of these funds will be to posts, camps, and stations where a large new construction outlay is in prospect. Expenditures on normal rehabilitation and improvements for the comfort of the personnel of the garrison; such as rehabilitation of family quarters, swimming pools, landscaping, etc., will be deferred until the construction incident to preparation for the emergency is assured.

"i. Layout plans for all contemplated temporary construction will be such that in the event units are later increased to war strength, space will be available for extension of existing and/or the construction of additional facilities to accommodate the increase for each unit. The layout should contemplate possible further expansion of the garrison.

"j. The Quartermaster General is authorized and directed to confer directly with the Corps Area Commander or the Chief of Arm or Service concerned. All details as to the buildings to be constructed, layout plans, priorities of construction, and the use of WPA funds will be settled on the ground. The Quartermaster General is also authorized to negotiate contracts for all construction involving a considerable use of skilled labor or urgently needed for the immediate accommodation of the units concerned utilizing WPA labor on projects of lesser priority."

THE UNITED STATES ARMY

Panama Governor

The nomination of Col. Glen E. Edgerton, CE, USA, to be governor of the Panama Canal was sent to the Senate yesterday. Colonel Edgerton, who is now on duty as Engineer of Maintenance for the Governor of the Canal, will relieve Brig. Gen. Clarence S. Ridley, CE, USA.

Reserves' Benefit Bill

The House of Representatives on 1 July 1940, passed the bill, S. 3131, which would extend the benefits of the United States Employees Compensation Act to members of the Officers' Reserve Corps and of the Enlisted Reserve Corps of the Army who were injured in line of duty while performing active duty or engaged in authorized training between 28 Feb. 1925 and 15 July 1939.

The House inserted an amendment which provides that the benefits accruing under the Compensation Act shall be paid only when the officer concerned was injured or killed in an accident involving a military hazard, such as flying in military aircraft, participation in military drills, target practice and tactical exercises and in the case of injury, the injury must be permanently partial or permanently total. The measure now goes back to the Senate for concurrence in the House amendments.

Col. Maxwell Export Chief

Acting under the provisions of newly enacted legislation, President Roosevelt this week appointed Col. Russell L. Maxwell, OD, USA, as Administrator of Export Control with final authority to say what might be shipped out of the country. The President explained that Colonel Maxwell would supersede even the Secretary of State, instructing him on what might be sold abroad.

At the same time a proclamation was issued putting a virtual embargo on the sale to foreign countries of any munitions, materials or machinery needed in the National Defense program. All such shipments will now be under control of the military. Articles listed in the proclamation were principally basic materials such as wool, cotton linters, silk, rubber, hides, and tin, and also airplane parts, armor plate, and certain machine tools.

Medical Basic Class Graduates

Graduation exercises for the second basic class were held at the Medical Field Service School, Carlisle Barracks, Pa., on 8 June. Brig. Gen. Roger Brooke, MD, school commandant, delivered the principal address and presented diplomas to the graduates.

Col. John M. Willis, MC, assistant commandant, presented the Skinner medal to 1st Lt. Charles E. Melcher, who attained the highest general average in his class. The 1st Division prize was presented to 1st Lt. Roland B. Sigafos, MC, by Lt. Col. Robert P. Williams. This award goes to the officer attaining the greatest proficiency in military art as applied to medical field service.

All officers of the class participated in Third Army maneuvers at Ft. Benning and in the Sabine Area, half being attached to regimental medical department detachments and half to medical regiments and battalions. In the army phase the assignments were alternated, so that each student could get experience with both detachments and units.

Ordnance Research

A most interesting and important booklet entitled, "The Research and Development Activities of the Ordnance Department, U. S. Army," has been issued by the Department. Written by Col. G. M. Barnes, OD, USA, the 31-page pamphlet gives a brief description of the work of the various arsenals and tells of the Ordnance research undertaken by some of the commercial firms.

Graduation Leaves Curtailed

Acting Secretary of War, Louis Johnson, announced this week that the 444 Second Lieutenants who were commissioned last month following graduation from the United States Military Academy will be notified at once that their graduation leaves will be terminated 31 July instead of 11 Sept. The graduation leave is normally three months.

It is being reduced because of the need of the expanding Regular Army for officers to train the troops. Some of the 444 new officers will go directly to troop duty, while others will receive a brief course of instruction at Special Service Schools prior to reporting to their new organizations.

Command of Third Division

Command of the Third Division and Ft. Lewis, Wash., was changed on 1 July when Maj. Gen. Walter C. Sweeney, USA, relinquished the post to Brig. Gen. Charles S. Thompson, USA. General Thompson formerly had been executive in charge of Reserve Affairs at the War Department.

General and Mrs. Sweeney left for Salt Lake City. General Sweeney will retire from active service on 30 November after reaching the age of 64 years.

USMA Faculty

Lt. Col. Oscar J. Gatchell, OD, USA, Professor of Ordnance and Gunnery at the United States Military Academy, West Point, N. Y., will be appointed Professor of Natural and Experimental Philosophy on 1 Aug. 1940, filling the vacancy caused by the retirement for age on 31 July 1940, of Professor Clifton Carroll Carter.

Colonel Carter, who has had over 45 years' military service, has been affectionately known to graduates of West Point for the past twenty years as "P. Carter." Colonel and Mrs. Carter expect to make Washington, D. C., their permanent home. Colonel Carter entered West Point from his native State, Kentucky, in 1895, following his graduation from A. & M. College of Kentucky in 1894. He received a degree of B. S. in E. E. at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, in 1909. He has been senior member of the faculty at the Military Academy since 1931. During his tour he was responsible for great expansion in his department, and for the installation of a wide variety of the latest engineering equipment and instruments, including hydraulic turbines and pumps, air compressors, air conditioning apparatus, Diesel engines, and a wind tunnel and link trainer utilized in the course in aerodynamics. In July, 1918 he was sent to France as a special observer with the American Expeditionary Forces for observation of armies in the field and for study of training systems, at the Military Schools of Allied Forces.

Colonel Gatchell was born at Fort Adams, R. I., 27 Dec. 1888. His father was General George W. Gatchell, a graduate of West Point in the Class of 1887. He entered West Point as a cadet on 2 March 1908, and upon graduation, 12 June 1912, he was appointed Second Lieutenant, Coast Artillery Corps.

Additional Reserve Chaplains

To minister to the spiritual needs of the rapidly expanding Army an increase in the number of Reserve Chaplains is necessary. Acting Secretary of War, Johnson, said 3 July, as he announced the lifting of the ban on appointments in the Chaplains' Reserve Corps. There is a shortage of 565 Reserve Chaplains. Colonel Johnson said. He declared the peacetime objective is to secure 1,573 Reserve Chaplains. At present there are 1,008 members in the Chaplains' Reserve. Appointment of Reserve Chaplains has been suspended for several months.

Colonel Johnson said that applications for appointment as Reserve Chaplains should be made directly to the Commanding Generals of the Corps Areas in which the candidate resides.

In discussing the qualifications candidates must possess he said:

"A candidate for original appointment in the Chaplains' Reserve Corps must be a citizen of the United States, actively engaged in the ministry as his principal vocation in life with at least three years' practical experience therein, within the age limits of 24 to 42 years, and ecclesiastically indorsed by his proper church official or committee."

"A candidate holding the degrees of A.B. and Th.B. from recognized colleges and theological schools, or who has evidence of graduation from a recognized four-year college and three-year theological course, may be exempted from the educational test. However, the candidate must submit an original thesis, non-theological in nature, of about 2,000 words in length. Where the candidate does not hold the required degrees or their educational equivalents, a written examination, covering such subjects as principles of education, economics, sociology, psychology, etc., involved in the profession of a clergyman in civil life is required. A physical examination, which may be obtained gratis from any Army surgeon at any military post or recruiting station, or made by any reputable physician, is mandatory for all candidates."

"No application will be favorably considered unless it is supported by an ecclesiastical indorsement issued by the authorized denominational official or committee recognized by the War Department."

Naval Expansion Bill

The Senate Naval Affairs Committee, on 3 July 1940, voted to report favorably the bill, HR 10100, which authorizes a 70 per cent expansion in the combatant forces of the United States Navy, with accompanying auxiliary tonnage, and an increase in airplane strength authorization up to 15,000 planes.

The Senate committee's action was taken after only one day's hearing on the House enacted expansion. The bill now goes to the floor of the Senate for action.

USNR Uniform Allowances

As a result of a ruling of the Comptroller General on 29 May, the Navy Department has issued the following instructions governing uniform allowances payable to former officers of class A-V (N) of the Naval Reserve who transfer to some other class of the Reserve:

The initial uniform gratuity of $150 paid to an officer of class A-V(N) upon first reporting for duty under his commission, or for active duty other than training as an aviation cadet, is in lieu of the $100 payable to a Naval Reserve officer first reporting to active duty or training duty with pay, or for attending fourteen drills with an organized division or squadron to which he has been regularly assigned.

The uniform gratuity of $50.00 payable four years after receipt of the initial uniform gratuity is payable to a former officer of class A-V(N) who is released from active duty and transferred to some other class of the Naval Reserve. Active duty under his commission as an officer of class A-V(N) will be counted in computing the required 112 days' active or training duty to entitle such officer to the additional payment of $50.

More Sub Officers Wanted

The Bureau of Navigation stated this week that incident to the recommissioning of submarines, it has become necessary to increase the number of officers for submarine training for the fiscal year 1941. The class selected for submarine training in January, 1941, will be ordered to report at New London about 1 Oct. 1940. In addition to these officers about fifteen more officers are desired.

Additional applications for submarine training for the 1 Oct. class are desired from officers of the Naval Academy classes of 1935, 1936, 1937 and 1938.

Machinist Appointed

Cullen C. Clark, machinist's mate, first class, has been issued an acting appointment as machinist in the Navy, to rank from June 20, 1940. He is attached to the USS Vestal.

Reserve Age Limit Increased

The Navy Department has increased the upper age limit from 35 years to 50 years for the reenlistment of former service men in Classes V-3 and V-6 of the Naval Reserve and for the enlistment of Class V-6 of particularly desirable men without prior service.

This action was taken due to receipt by Bureau of Navigation of many requests of former service men who served during the World War and are therefore disqualified for enlistment under the present upper age limit. Requests have also been received for enlistment from non-service men who appear qualified in all respects for Class V-6 except that they are more than 35 years old.

Class V-3 comprises enlisted men of communication and other ratings associated with organizations of the Naval Communication Reserve. Class V-6 covers enlisted men not eligible for other classes.

Retired Officers' Association

The Retired Officers' Association of the U. S. Army, Navy, Marine Corps, Coast Guard, Coast and Geodetic Survey, and Public Health Service, with Headquarters in Los Angeles, Calif., advise that recently it has increased its Roster by the following new members or contributors: U. S. Army—Lt. Col. James B. Harrington, (USA-Ret.); Captain F. Christian, (USA-Ret.); Captain A. D. Edmunds, (USA-Ret.);

Marine Corps Reserve

The Comptroller General of the United States ruled this week that members of a Marine Corps Reserve organization ordered to training and required to report to their station several hours before their departure to the place of training, and upon return, required to be at the armory several hours before release, were not entitled to subsistence allowance for such periods.

Nor is such a subsistence allowance payable to the members of the organization for the period of travel en masse to and from the place of training, the Comptroller General stated, pointing out that from time immemorial enlisted personnel of traveling organizations have been subsisted in kind, instead of being given a money allowance and permitted to procure food individually.

141 Marine Officers Appointed

Appointment of 141 persons to be second lieutenants in the United States Marine Corps was confirmed by the Senate on 19 June. Three of the new officers, former enlisted men in the Marine Corps, will rank from 20 June; the remainder will rank from 25 June.

THE U. S. MARINE CORPS

Compulsory Training Bill

The first legislative action toward the establishment of a system of compulsory military training for the men of the United States was taken on 2 July, when the Senate Military Affairs Committee began hearings on the Burke-Wadsworth bill.

The committee heard as its first witness Grenville Clark, who served as a major and lieutenant colonel in the Adjutant General's Department during the World War and who is at present Chairman of the National Emergency Committee of the Military Training Camps Association of the United States. Mr. Clark emphasized that this group is interested solely in the military features of universal service and disclaimed any advocacy of non-military youth conscription.

He reminded the committee that Henry L. Stimson, awaiting confirmation as Secretary of War, in appearing before the Military Committee the day previous had advocated universal conscription.

He was followed on the stand by Dr. James B. Conant, President of Harvard University, who said that he favors the compulsory military training theory and the Burke-Wadsworth bill, but emphasized educational functions such as the teaching of medicine, chemistry and engineering. He said that the loss of experts in these brackets would be a major defeat for the United States.

He compared the bill under consideration with the systems used in European countries and said that whereas in Europe the entire male population of the ages of 18 and 19 are given training, resulting within a short time in the placing of all the defense burden on a narrow age group, the Burke-Wadsworth bill spreads out the responsibility and does not deal so harshly with any one limited group.

Col. William J. Donovan, ORC, who commanded New York's "Fighting Sixty-Ninth" during the World War, said that the nation and the Congress would be lax in its duty if men were not given training before being sent into battle. He said that it would be unfair to the youth of the country to send them into warfare without the proper equipment and knowledge of how to use it. He cited several instances of his World War service in which men were sent into units as replacements without ever having had instruction in handling the rifle or primary military tactics. He said that warfare has changed in every detail, down to the most minor ones. Colonel Donovan said that more and more small units are being trained to be self-sufficient because of the speed of advance and lack of liaison. Leaders, he stated, must be developed to handle such groups. He declared that men must be trained to understand that grouping and lack of independence (huddling) in the face of the tremendous firepower developed by modern arms is suicide. Such training, he contended, involves time and schooling.

Pershing Endorses Training

Senator Morris Sheppard, Chairman of the Senate Military Affairs Committee, introduced into the record a letter from General John J. Pershing, General of the Armies of the United States, in which General Pershing endorsed the Burke-Wadsworth bill, but expressed his belief that the period of training should be sufficient not only to insure well trained soldiers but also to provide for the organization of well trained units. General Pershing's letter was as follows:

"Dear Senator Sheppard:
"I thank you for your cordial letter giving me an opportunity to speak a word regarding military training for the young men of our country."

"First of all, let me say that if we had adopted compulsory military training in 1914 it would not have been necessary for us to send partially trained boys into battle against the veteran troops of our adversary, and certainly we could have ended the conflict much sooner, with the saving of many thousands of lives and billions of treasure."

"Coming down to the present war in Europe, it is perfectly evident that if universal military training had been the practice in Great Britain the results would have been vastly different. In modern war the advantage is decidedly on the side that is ready."

"In its effect upon the individual, there is no doubt but that universal military training would be productive of great benefit to the youth of the nation, both as citizens and as prospective soldiers. Such training would develop respect for constituted authority; it would impress the individual with his obligation to and pride in his country, in contrast to the present tendency to emphasize the responsibility of the nation to the individual. It would improve the physical development of our young men, as well as promote their general health. Such a measure, in my opinion, would promote democracy by bringing into intimate contact and on an equal footing young men in all walks of life. Moreover, it might well be the determining factor in keeping us out of war."

"The expansion of our armed forces to the numbers needed in times like these requires that the procurement of men be placed on an equitable and efficient basis. In general, these principles seem to be embodied in the bill introduced by Senator Burke. I have not been able to study the bill sufficiently to analyze its various requirements but it is sound in that it appears to meet our experience of the World War in the procurement of men, and it seems to be in general accord with the plans that have been in development ever since that time."

"I feel that the necessity for men for the immediate increase of the present regular forces should be the first consideration. Thereafter, when these men have been trained, we should proceed to the training of men by restricted age classes."

"Since the primary purpose of the bill is to procure men for the land and naval forces of the United States, it possibly would seem better to omit consideration of home defense, leaving that question to be settled by separate legislation."

ation is now carrying large quantities of power into areas where it had not been available hitherto, and it has already brought about the establishment of an aluminum industry on the West coast where none existed before.

Among other resources essential in peace as well as in war time are timber and foodstuffs. Here again Interior plays an important role. It is not usually known that the Department of Interior administers no less than half of the timber resources of the United States. The great total of 130,000,000 acres of forest in continental United States and Alaska is under this Department. These forests are not just "forest areas," but they are, in the main, heavily forested. The forests in Interior are operated on sound conservation principles: young timber is carefully preserved and protected for future use and mature trees are logged for private industry.

In the matter of food resources Interior also is an important contributor. The Grazing Service of the Department of Interior administers the vast public grazing ranges of the West—approximately 134,000,000 acres of public lands in the ten western States of Arizona, California, Colorado, Idaho, Montana, Nevada, New Mexico, Oregon, Utah and Wyoming. These lands furnish part time grazing for 11,000,000 head of livestock. Of this livestock, about 1,600,000 are cattle, 9,200,000 are sheep, 109,000 are horses, and 93,000 are goats. Here is a vast supply of food, wool and hides, all essential in a national defense program.

In this connection one should not neglect mentioning the CCC camps. The Grazing Service is operating 91 CCC camps and is training an average of 3,000 boys each year in such necessary skills as truck driving, mechanics, road building, machine operation, and various types of construction.

Another food resource in the Department of Interior is fish. The Bureau of Fisheries of this Department operates 110 fish hatcheries in almost every State in the Union. These hatcheries propagate fish which are then used to stock streams. A number of the hatcheries are experimental, for the purpose of improving the breeding. The Bureau of Fisheries controls the fish industry in Alaska. In 1939 this Alaskan industry, particularly salmon amounted to $40,000,000. The Bureau of Fisheries also helps the fish industry by its statistical and economic researches. Its technological researches cover a broad field of general food technology. As a result of this work, waste products have been salvaged and a considerable portion of the fish meal manufactured has been removed from the fertilizer and placed in the animal food field. The same is true of fish oils, much of which was formerly utilized in the soap and paint industries. Now this oil is being used in the medicinal and animal food fields. The importance of these researches is realized only when one considers that the modern poultry industry could hardly exist without the contribution by the fisheries of vitamins A and D in biologically tested fish and fish liver oils.

Since I am writing about national defense, I feel that I ought to say something about the contributions of the Public Works Administration. While the latter is not in the Department of the Interior, it was connected with the Department during the seven years I was Administrator of PWA.

In those seven years the Public Works Administration added considerably to the basic foundation of national defense. Despite insistent criticism for so doing, PWA, under my direction, allotted more than $497,000,000 for defense purposes, as well as hundreds of millions of dollars for such civil public works that play a role in national defense, as airports, highways, power plants, hospitals, docks, wharves and piers. In addition to providing $237,000,000 for naval vessels, we made allotments for naval shore stations, for machine tools, for arsenals, for repairs of arsenals and rehabilitations of ordnance plants, for barracks and housing for the army, for seacoast defenses, for aircraft construction and aircraft engine production, for drydocks, for National Guard equipment, for air bases, and for numerous other primary defense purposes. The Army probably recalls with relief that it was PWA money that ended so many service slums and erected decent quarters in their place.

To return to the Department of the Interior proper, it not only administers and conserves basic natural resources, but its trained personnel and its expert knowledge of the various fields of metallurgy, minerals, forestry, power, grazing, and other functions, are available for instant use in any program authorized by the Government.

This Department is fully prepared and instantly ready to offer its facilities, its skills, and its resources for the national defense. Orders have already been issued that defense matters are to be given priority. To coordinate defense activities, a Departmental Defense Resources Committee has been established. This Committee will serve as a clearing house on all defense problems and will provide a mechanism by which outside agencies may quickly be put into contact with the Bureau and technical experts who can render the assistance required.

The Department of the Interior, in short, is ready and able to do its full share in the defense of our democracy.

Air Corps Tactical School

Brig. Gen. Frederick L. Martin, commanding the Third Wing, General Headquarters Air Force, Barksdale Field, La., delivered the graduation address and presented diplomas to the 99 officers who graduated from the fourth and last of the series of three month courses at the Air Corps Tactical School, Maxwell Field, Saturday morning, 29 June. The ACTS is being suspended indefinitely because of the Air Corps expansion program. Maxwell Field has been converted into a training center effective 1 July.

General Martin was introduced by Col. Walter R. Weaver, AC, commanding officer of Maxwell Field. Among other things, General Martin said: "Effective tomorrow (30 June) this institution closes as a school for an indefinite period. This action is taken with great reluctance and after the most serious deliberation. This deliberation included a careful weighing of the well known value of the instruction and research conducted here, against the pressing need for its personnel and physical plant for other activities. The program which the Air Corps must accomplish within the next few months requires diversion of a large part of the Air Corps Tactical School personnel and facilities to other uses as an emergency measure. However, reopening of the school at the earliest practicable date is contemplated. With that in view, a nucleus of personnel will continue on duty with the tactical school for the purpose of perpetuating its identity, preparing extension courses and performing such other functions as may be assigned by the Chief of Air Corps."

"Finally, I wish most sincerely to endorse the principles embodied in Senator Burke's bill, although I feel that the length of service should be sufficient in the present situation to guarantee not only the individual training of the soldier but to insure well-trained units as well."

Brig. Gen. John MacAuley Palmer, USA-Ret., also appeared in support of the bill. He told the committee that in 1918 he was detailed by General Pershing, at the direction of the War Department, to represent General Pershing in preparation of plans for a permanent military system. He said that despite the approval of nearly all of the members of the General Staff of a plan which would have perpetuated the Citizen War Army, through the 64 divisions of the Regular Army, National Guard and Organized Reserves, the War Department withheld approval and instead approved the creation of a peace-time standing Army of more than 500,000 men, with no provision for the perpetuation of the great Citizen Army of the World War. He said that following the action of the War Department, Senator Wadsworth, who was chairman of the Senate Military Affairs Committee and is now a Representative and co-sponsor of the bill, told him that an adequate military machine must be built despite the War Department's action. He said that he had been detailed to the Senate Military Affairs Committee to help draft legislation for compulsory military service. However, the legislation was amended in the 1920 National Defense Act, which set up only a skeleton of the plan, with no compulsory features. General Palmer cited the fact that George Washington had endorsed the compulsory military training theory and said that it has become increasingly evident that some such system is necessary.

Observers believe that the hearings on the Burke-Wadsworth bill will continue for about a week, and that during this period the War Department will ask the committee to substitute its own compulsory training bill for the bill under consideration.

The essential features of the Burke-Wadsworth bill are:

"Registration. All male citizens and resident aliens between 18 and 65 except those enrolled in the armed forces of the United States, including the National Guard and reserves, shall register.

"Categories. Men registered shall be divided into two categories:

"(a) Men between 21 and 45, who shall be liable for training and service in the land and naval forces;

"(b) Men between 18 and 21, and 45 and 65, who shall be liable only for training and service in home defense units near their residences.

"Selection. The men required at any time for training in peace and service in war shall be selected by lot, subject to the deferments and age groupings below referred to. Until completion of the registration and classification of the men between 31 and 45, the selection will be made from those between 21 and 31. In order that each group called for training will represent a cross section of the eligible age groups, it shall be the ultimate objective that in the selection of men, not more than 87% nor less than 78% shall be between 21 and 31, not more than 15% nor less than 10% between 31 and 38 and not more than 7% nor less than 3% between 38 and 45.

"Deferment. The training and service of men whose employment in industry and agriculture is necessary to the national interest, ministers of religion, those with dependents and those who are unfit shall be deferred under regulations made by the President. Local boards shall pass on deferments.

"Training. Men who are selected and whose training is not deferred shall be trained during peace time for eight consecutive months. The period may be extended if Congress declares the national interest is imperilled. Vocational and educational training will be included and the men will have an opportunity to qualify for officer rank. Pay will be $5.00 a month plus traveling expenses.

"For ten years after training or until they reach 45, trained men will be reservists and subject to additional training for not more than one month in any year and not oftener than three years in any five.

"Expiration of the Act. The Act would become inoperative on 15 May 1945, unless continued in effect by Congress."

Its independence will be absolute. Its interest will be directed solely to the inculcation of sound military ideas and to the elevation of the public service in all its departments."—From Vol. 1, No. 1, of the Army and Navy Journal, published August 29, 1863.

SATURDAY, JULY 6, 1940

"We owe it to ourselves to understand that the Navy is rather more than a mere instrumentality of warfare."—WARREN G. HARDING.

OUR PRIORITY LIST

1. Upward revision of pay schedules for commissioned, warrant, and enlisted personnel, active and retired.
2. Revision of the promotion system for the Staff Corps of the Navy in accordance with the sentiment expressed by the officers concerned; perfection of the Navy Line Personnel Act; authorization for the retirement of colonels of the Army with the rank of brigadier general; clarification of the coast guard promotion system.
3. Expansion of the Regular Army and the National Guard to a strength of at least 550,000 men with provision for complete personnel and materiel and training for 100 per cent efficiency; personnel for the Navy and Marine Corps capable of fully manning all vessels of the fleet and the Fleet Marine Force.
4. Additional increases in grades and ratings, with compensation for technical knowledge and skill required by modernization.
5. Active duty training and service school attendance for available officers of the Reserve Corps; appropriations for the expansion program of the Naval Reserves.
6. Revision of pension laws to assure widows of the Regular Services a living income.
7. Compensation for service personnel whose privately owned automobiles are employed on Government business.

AFTER THOROUGH examination and cross examination of Henry L. Stimson and William Franklin Knox, to give the latter his full name, the Senate Military and Naval Committees, by overwhelming majorities, agreed to report favorably their nominations to be Secretary of War and Secretary of the Navy respectively. Confirmation by the Senate will follow, perhaps after protracted debate. Whatever one may think of the President's action in dismissing Mr. Woodring from the war portfolio, his right to do so cannot be questioned, any more than can his right to have as his advisers men whose minds go along with his. Looking at the incident in retrospect, it is apparent that politics were responsible for it. The President gave it this tinge when he announced the appointment on the day the Republican Resolutions Committee met in Philadelphia. Some Republicans promptly read Messrs. Stimson and Knox out of their Party. Then it appeared that these gentlemen, in accepting the President's tender, were motivated by the highest patriotism, that they felt there was no politics in National Defense, and that in complying with the President's wish that they assist him, they were acting without regard to their political views and political affiliations. In fact, both men openly stated that they were opposed to New Deal policies. On the matter of defense, however, they were in full accord with the President's attitude, and they were entirely willing to sacrifice their personal interests to speed National preparation. It is an attitude worthy of men who have been honored by their Country and Party, and what may always be expected from patriotic citizens.

THE FORWARD-LOOKING and logical step taken by the War Department in directing the creation of an Armored Field Force must not be taken as lessening the necessity for filling out our horse Cavalry and putting it on as effective a basis as possible. Suffering many losses under the successive reductions in the Army since the World War, but sharing in virtually none of the recent increases, the horse Cavalry has gone forward doggedly with a training and development program which has kept abreast of the times and yet preserved its traditionally American role of rapid mobility over all types of terrain, high fire power, shock and surprise. When the task of developing mechanization was turned over to it, the Cavalry went forward with zest. The original mechanized regiment was developed into a brigade and then expanded to a point where small increases would have made it a division. The chief of Cavalry last Fall urged that two mechanized divisions be organized at once and two more if an emergency should arise. But in recognizing the importance of mechanization there must be no deemphasis of horse Cavalry. The United States, nor the Western hemisphere which we are now committed to defend, is not all flat country like Poland and northern France. There is much mountainous terrain, sandy and swampy country, where horse Cavalry could operate with great advantage and where motorized elements would be at a corresponding disadvantage. Moreover the United States possesses great animal resources, some 11,000,000 horses. The failure to be prepared to exploit this superiority would be shamefully uneconomical. Unfortunately there is too restricted an understanding of the capabilities of modern cavalry and too much disposition to think of it in terms of outmoded charges with drawn sabres. There should be more widespread recognition of the fact that the American Cavalryman today fights dismounted with varied automatic weapons of high fire power, but that the horse enables him to get into position (often in places otherwise inaccessible) more rapidly than the enemy anticipates, or when the occasion requires to disperse rapidly for protection. Portee Cavalry, made possible by the use of regular commercial stake trucks, possesses the same strategic mobility as motorized infantry and yet retains the tactical mobility afforded by the horse in the theatre of operations. With the promised expansion of the First Cavalry Division, the next step should be the completion of the Second Cavalry Division and organization of units necessary to build a Cavalry Corps. This should be done promptly.

Get the Hook

An old Scotch lady had the habit of driving to church. Her coachman, when he considered the sermon nearly at an end, would slip out quietly to have the carriage ready. One Sunday, John, after hanging about the door, grew impatient. Creeping down the aisle toward his mistress, he whispered:
"Is he no dune yet?" "Dune!" returned the old lady in high indignation, for her patience had long been exhausted, "He's dune for half an hour, but he dune know it and he wont stop."

The plight of young Lieutenant Towne evoked a number of last-lines from limericks. From these, the Humor Editor has chosen one submitted by "A. H." to round out the story. As completed by "A. H.", the limerick reads as follows: There was a lieutenant named Towne, Who loved to fly his plane upside-down, One day in a wind, Our young lieutenant spinned,

Now his "full dress" is an angel's flowing gown.

Well, a good part of the male civilian population of the nation is now preparing for two weeks or more of camp life, so perhaps some of the old timers can find time to send in a last line to the following limerick:

They tell of a Reservist named Burke,
Who was very allergic to work,
He gold-bricked all the day,
In a most annoying way,

(Any similarity in names to persons living or dead is purely coincidental.)

SERVICE NEWS AND GOSSIP

Foreign Affairs—That Japan is swinging perilously near to direct aid to Germany and Italy in Asia and the Pacific is a conclusion which is deeply concerning the American, British and Dutch Governments. While persisting in the statement that she has no intention to become involved in the European struggle, it is evident that it is her purpose to take advantage of the invasion of Holland, the capitulation of France, and the weakness of the British Empire, to achieve the New Order in Asia which she has been proclaiming since the war in China began three years ago. That Order her Foreign Affairs Minister, Mr. Arita, has supplemented by a warning of determination "to exterminate by any and every means" Third Power assistance to the Chung King Government, and by a declaration that she proposes to be the center of a single sphere which will include all the countries of East Asia and the South Seas. Apprehending Japanese attack, the British have evacuated all civilians from Hong Kong, which is now purely a military fortress, and have increased the defenses of the Singapore Naval base; the French in Indo-China are preparing to resist an invasion, and like preparations have been made by the Dutch in their East Indian possessions. Secretary Hull has stated that in spite of the Japanese declarations, this Government will not modify its policies of the Open Door in China, maintenance of the status quo in the Pacific Area, and respect for existing treaties. To emphasize this attitude, the United States Fleet is remaining based upon Hawaii. Its latest maneuvers, which were conducted in a secret area, were concluding at the moment Arita was expressing Japan's enlarged policy with respect to the Far East.

The identity of the Japanese "sphere of dominance" policy with that of Hitler in Continental Europe would seem to indicate at least a purpose on the part of Tokyo to act along parallel lines with the European dictators. It has iterated and reiterated that it prefers to act independently in the Far East in seizing the opportunity which the downfall of the French and Dutch Empires and the weakness of Great Britain affords. The denunciation by her South China Army of the agreement to give the British Authorities twenty-four hours notice of any military movements in the vicinity of Hong Kong, has been followed by troop concentration from the Canton River to Mirs Bay, where Admiral Dewey mobilized his squadron before sailing to destroy the Spanish Naval Force at Manila 42 years ago. Japan further has charged that the British have supplied military information to the Chung-King Government, which London has denied, and has demanded the suppression of the traffic in war supplies between Burman and Chung King. Concerning Great Britain, as well as the French, is the status of the International Settlement and the French concession at Shanghai, which may be upset any day, since Japan is determined upon complete control of that port through the Wang-Ching-Wel puppet regime. Concerning the French also are the concentration of Japanese troops along their Indo-China border, and of a large Army on Hainan Island, and the activity of Japanese warships in the Gulf of Tonkin. Equally apprehensive are the Dutch, who are considering Japanese demands for increased trade concessions in their East Indian Possessions. Failure to comply in every respect may be used as an excuse for attack.

The operations and designs of the Japanese probably are due to their belief that the United States will not enforce the Far Eastern policies proclaimed by President Roosevelt. It apparently believes that this Government will be careful to avoid a positive stand while the presidential campaign is in progress. The Republican nominee, Wendell Willkie, has said that he "sees eye to eye" in foreign affairs with President Roosevelt, but before election he may modify his views to conform to the unwillingness of the country to engage in a foreign war. However, it is pointed out that Roosevelt will continue to be President until next January, and it is in his power in the meantime to commit the Government so that if Mr. Willkie should succeed him he would be compelled to carry out the policy prescribed by his predecessor. It can be stated without reservation that so long as the present administration is in control, it will not recognize Japanese aggression that it will continue to give financial help to Chung King, and that it will act to an unpredictable point to safeguard the territorial status quo in the Pacific as well as in the mainland possessions of the British and French, and the integrity of China. It has taken note of reports that the Japanese Fleet is concentrating in the vicinity of Yap, a mandated Island of the Carolina Group, which lies to the east of the Philippines. If these reports be true, then the reason for such strategic location must be to meet the United States Fleet should it be sent to the Far East, and not as a screen for operations in connection with French Indo-China. Another report is that Italian and, possibly, German submarines, have appeared in the Indian Ocean, and, perhaps, are enroute to Asiatic Waters to cooperate with the Japanese. Little credence is placed in this report at present for the reason that Japan wants to preserve her independence, and in this way avoid the Far East being a subject of discussion when the inevitable peace negotiations shall take place.

Entering into the Far Eastern situation is the policy of the French Government as a result of the seizure or destruction of French warships. Any association of France with Germany and Italy doubtless will cause the Japanese Government to refrain from action against French Indo-China and the French South Seas possessions, as contemplated by Minister Arita, until an understanding shall have been reached with Berlin and Rome. Possibly French warships will seek refuge in Japanese ports, although the greater likelihood is that they will concentrate at Saigon. With Great Britain demonstrably in command of the Seas, Japan is likely to move more cautiously, and it is this fact that may lessen the danger of attack on British interests which existed prior to the stern action of the British Navy.

Mr. Woodring May "Tell All"—Former Secretary of War Harry H. Woodring will be the guest of honor at a dinner to be given by his friends in Topeka next Tuesday, 9 July, at which time, according to reports in the Kansas City Star, he may "tell all" concerning his resignation as Secretary of War and his relation with the President in his efforts to build up the Army. Mr. Woodring's letter of resignation was not made public at the White House, although the President's letter of acceptance was given to the press. The President's aides explained that Mr. Woodring's letter was not to be made public because it was "too personal." Columnists have been rather open in their speculations that the letter reviewed Mr. Woodring's effort to build up the Army while it was at the same time being deprived of material by shipments to the Allies. Thus, should the former secretary decide to reveal the inside story in his address next week it will be a matter of intense interest to the service as well as to the citizenry.

The former secretary also is planning to attend the Democratic convention in Chicago where he will go as delegate-at-large from Kansas.

Father Curran was recently called to active duty for one year by the War Department. He holds the grade of first lieutenant in the Corps of Chaplains reserve. He will succeed Chaplain James C. McGoohan, a first lieutenant in the Regular Army. Chaplain McGoohan will leave New York City by Army transport for duty in the Panama Canal Zone during the month of August. He went to Langley Field on 11 Dec. 1939.

Though this is Chaplain Curran's first service with the Air Corps he is no novice at active duty. Last year he completed twelve months of service with the Civilian Conservation Corps. He covered the camps radiating out of Camp Beauregard, Louisiana. Chaplain Curran has had four months previous service as a reserve Chaplain with the Regular Army, being the regimental chaplain for the 16th Medical Regiment at Fort Benning and at its home station at Fort Devens, Mass. The 16th participated in maneuvers in Louisiana. He has the distinction of being the only chaplain on active duty, either regular or reserve, who is a member of the Order of Dominican Fathers. He has completed courses of instruction at branches of the Dominican House of Studies at various studiums located at River Forest, Illinois, Somerset, Ohio; Washington, D. C., and Springfield, Kentucky. He is also a bachelor of arts of Providence College, Providence, Rhode Island, graduating in 1923. Previously he had graduated from Boston College High School, Boston, Mass.

Though Chaplain Curran is new to Army air bases he has done flying as a passenger in a private airplane. He was stranded once in a potato patch in the wilds of Louisiana.

Marine Corps—A redistribution of the commissioned grades in the Marine Corps will be made probably before 15 July, it was indicated at headquarters this week. Entrance of 164 new officers this fiscal year, including 120 R.O.T.C. graduates, 25 Naval Academy graduates, 8 Reserve Officers, 3 noncommissioned officers, 6 platoon leaders and 2 aviation cadets, will make the redistribution necessary to preserve the allowable percentages in each grade. Under the law, one per cent of the officers may be general officers, four per cent colonels, eight per cent lieutenant colonels, 15 per cent majors, 30 per cent captains and 42 per cent lieutenants. No new general officers will be made this year. One additional brigadier general file was created last year, resulting in promotion of Col. Holland Smith, and an additional general's file will probably be created next year.

As of 27 June there were 1,277 Regular commissioned officers in the Marine Corps, including 12 additional numbers who are not counted in figuring redistribution of grades. Marine recruiting officers are out to get an average of 1,600 new recruits a month, in order to obtain 9,000 additional men for the Marine Corps by the end of the next fiscal year. It is estimated that after replacements are made, this will result in addition of 1,100 to 1,200 men to the Corps each month.

Medical Department—During the fiscal year 1941, six courses will be given at the School of Aviation Medicine, Randolph Field, Texas. Instead of the old four-month course which led to rating as flight surgeon, the new six-weeks' course will lead to rating as examiner. After a year's satisfactory service as examiner, medical officers will become eligible for appointment as flight surgeons. The course in aviation medicine is open to majors, captains and lieutenants of the Medical Corps who may make application through channels to the Surgeon General. Schedule of courses is as follows: 15 July to 24 August; 9 September to 19 October; 1 November to 13 December; 2 January to 13 February; 17 February to 29 March, and 14 April to 24 May.

Twenty of the 29 officers who are to take the course of instruction beginning 15 July have already received orders. They are Capt. Ellis M. Altfather, R. L. Bohannon and John Brancato, and 1st Lts. Hanes M. Fowler, Marion F. Green, Carl W. Hall, John R. McBride, Hallman E. Sanders, Charles C. Seamahorn, Dan B. Searcy, Carl R. Stilson, E. E. Baird, James W. Brown, W. F. Cook, C. F. Haughey, J. R. McGraw, T. T. Martin, C. E. Melcher, R. L. O'Toole and Julius Snyder.

The holding of three courses of instruction at the Army Dental School during the fiscal year 1941 has been approved by the War Department. The basic course for officers will begin 16 Sept. and end 23 Dec., 1940. The advanced graduate course will run from 1 Feb. to 29 May, 1941. The course for enlisted dental technicians will run from 16 Sept. to 14 Sept. 1941.

Certificates of graduation were given ten physical therapy aides 25 June at the Army Medical Center by Brig. Gen. Shelley U. Marietta, MD. Graduates of the training courses were Elizabeth Anderson, Ruth W. Ellinger, Margaret C. Gadaacz, Julia D. Greves, Kathleen E. Lomasney, Grace E. Mayer, Mary Ruth Riedel, Elizabeth Rowe, Katherine Warsaw and Mary Ethel Whitener.

Naval Reserve Training—The Navy's Bureau of Navigation has issued Naval Reserve Circular Letter No. 22-40, prescribing training quotas for the Organized and Volunteer Classes of the Naval Reserve for the fiscal year 1941. No officer or man other than those attached to Marine Reserve Corps organizations, shall be given more than 14 days' training duty with pay, plus travel time, and those attached to organizations of the Marine Corps Reserve shall not be given more than 15 days' training. Armory drills shall not exceed 48 for each individual.

Army War College—With decision to suspend classes at the Army War College in Washington, the college is being converted into a virtual adjunct of the War Department General Staff. Members of the faculty are being assigned special staff studies and are being assisted by some additional officers ordered to the college. A number of the recent graduates of the college also have technical station there temporarily, until new assignments can be given them. Many of these officers had been ordered to duty with Reserve components of the Army, but the organization of the additional Regular Army units is creating a need for them in the Regular Establishment.

Air Corps—Kelly Field recently watched Brig. Gen. R. C. Richardson, jr., USA, pin the "wings" of the Air Corps on his son, Lt. R. C. Richardson, III. General Richardson was the principal speaker at the graduation of Kelly Field's largest class, composed of 137 flying cadets and 99 recent West Point graduates. A slightly smaller class will graduate from the Air Corps Advanced Flying School every five weeks under the new plan to turn out 7,000 pilots a year.

Lt. Richardson is a graduate of the Military Academy, Class 1939, and completed the nine-months flying course of 210 hours in the air and 500 hours of ground instruction to become an integral cog in Uncle Sam's first line of defense.

Reserve Officers Training Corps—In response to requests from high schools and colleges all over the country for the establishment of Reserve Officers' Training Corps (R. O. T. C.), the War Department states that it is probable that no additional units will be authorized in the near future. Some of the Regular Army officers now on R. O. T. C. duty and on duty with other civilian components—National Guard, Organized Reserves, and Civilian Conservation Corps—will be transferred to combat assignments to meet the training needs of the expanding Regular Army. No definite numbers are available at this time. Retired Regular Army officers and some members of the Officers' Reserve Corps will be used to replace the active Regular officers.

The War Department is of the opinion that it is unwise to augment the R. O. T. C. until adequate provisions are made for existing units. Present demands of the Regular Army preclude the assignment of active officers, either to complete the requirements of present units or to provide the necessary instructors—non-commissioned as well as commissioned—for the many schools that desire enlarged or new units.

The Regular Army has about 14,000 officers; in the Officers' Reserve Corps there are some 117,000 officers. Approximately 9,000 newly commissioned officers will be added this month to the Officers' Reserve Corps due to graduation from R. O. T. C. camps. About 400 more will be commissioned from the Citizens' Military Training Camps. The War Department will use some of these young Reserve officers, particularly in the grade of lieutenant, to carry out its expansion program.

There are 826 Regular Army officers on duty with units of the R. O. T. C. Approximately 186,000 students received R. O. T. C. training in the academic year just ending, according to estimates. About one of every twelve universities and colleges in the country offer R. O. T. C. training to students. About 140 public or private secondary schools and 42 military academies gave military training to some 75,000 young men this academic year.

When the United States entered the World War it had an officers' reserve of about 3,000 officers.

Wright Field Power Plant Laboratory—As the group of new Power Plant Laboratory buildings nears completion, the south end of Wright Field, Ohio, assumes a new contour and it will soon be difficult to remember how the Power Plant Laboratories looked when —. Of brick construction and simple design, the buildings form a decidedly impressive mass, all the more impressive when the importance of their purpose is remembered—the development of the most reliable and efficient engines possible for Army aircraft. These new buildings include a building for offices and drafting rooms, a dynamometer laboratory for testing and calibrating large engines and certain accessories under altitude conditions, and additional torque stands for endurance testing of complete large power plants.

The Laboratory Building, 200 feet by 50 feet, has two floors and a basement. The main floor will provide about 25 offices for officers and administrative and engineering personnel. A number of the offices will be about 10 by 20 feet and a few others will be larger. There will also be a conference room. The second floor will have an exceptionally well-lighted drafting room and additional space for offices. Fireproof vaults for confidential records are provided on both floors. Occupation of this building will release some much-needed space for enlarged overhaul shop facilities in the present Power Plant building.

The new Dynamometer Building will have one story with basement and, with a connecting corridor to the present building, will cover an area of about 30,000 square feet. Two test rooms with adjoining soundproof control rooms will be provided for testing both liquid-cooled and air-cooled engines developing 8000 hp. from sea level up to 15,000 ft. altitude, and 4400 hp. at 30,000 ft. altitude. The dynamometers are designed for testing any shape of engine and form of drive, including counter-rotating concentric propeller shafts. This building will also contain three large laboratories designed respectively for testing turbo superchargers, carburetors, and aircraft heat exchangers, under simulated altitude conditions. The basement of the building will contain blowers, exhausters, refrigeration equipment, pumps, etc., requiring about 12,000 hp. in electric motors. To house the additional switchboards for controlling this electric power, a 53 by 68-foot extension has been added to the south end of the present building. A water cooling tower will be erected over the present cooling pond.

The east extension to the torque stand building will provide four engine rooms, with related control, and auxiliary rooms, arranged to accommodate engines of any form in sizes up to 8000 hp. The 45-foot square air passages will permit testing of propellers up to 40 feet in diameter, and supplementary engine cooling will be provided. The sound dissipating stacks will be 80 feet high. The small oil storage building north of the torque stands will be enlarged to three times its present size to house fuel pumps and provide additional oil storage.

Bandmasters Bill

President Franklin D. Roosevelt has vetoed the bill, H.R. 3840, which would have provided commissioned status for bandmasters of the United States Army.

In vetoing the measure, the President stated:

"It is the purpose of the bill to give to Army bandmasters the status of commissioned officers. Under the present organization of the Army, bandmasters are warrant officers. The legislation constitutes a novel departure in the organization of the Army for which there is no necessity from a military standpoint. The grade of warrant officer now accorded to bandmasters in the Army is fully adequate for the duties and responsibilities devolving on them.

"Moreover, the bill would single out a special group of warrant officers for preferential treatment by way of increases in rank and compensation, without regard to the status of other warrant officers who perform duties and have responsibilities that are equal to and in certain cases greater than those of bandmasters.

"In view of the foregoing considerations, I am constrained to withhold my approval of the bill."

Signal Corps Eligible Lists

Printed below are the lists of noncommissioned officers of the Signal Corps eligible for promotion to the first three grades, and the lineal list of master sergeants, as of 1 July.

Under the new system of promotions, promotions will be made, with few special exceptions, from the lineal lists below, in order of standing, provided individuals are qualified for promotion.

When wholesale promotions are made because of expansion of the Army, even those not qualified will be promoted, but all those promoted will hold temporary warrants only, and any future curtailment of the Army will probably see those holding temporary warrants who were not qualified for promotion reduced to their former grades.

It will be noted that there are two or three missing numbers as well as several additions in the list. These throw out the sequence of numbers, but the lists show relative standings.

Technical sergeants whose names are preceded by an asterisk are qualified for promotion to master sergeant, and staff sergeants whose names are preceded by an asterisk are qualified for promotion to technical sergeant. All eligibles for staff sergeant are, of course, qualified for promotion to that grade.

Provisional Officers' Bill

The House of Representatives on July 1940, passed the bill S. 458, which would extend to provisional, probatory or temporary officers of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps or Coast Guard who served in the World War, the benefits of the Emergency Officers Retirement Act of 24 May, 1928.

The measure now goes back to the Senate for concurrence in a clarifying amendment inserted by the House.

Favor New Secretaries

Nominations of Henry L. Stimson and Frank Knox to be Secretary of War and Secretary of the Navy respectively are before the Senate and will be acted upon on Monday or Tuesday, 8 or 9 July. Mr. Stimson's nomination was reported favorably by the Senate Military Affairs Committee on 2 July, by a vote of 14-3. Opponents in opposition were Elbert D. Thomas, of Utah, Edwin C. Johnson, of Idaho, and Ernest Lundeen, of Minn. Colonel Knox's nomination was reported favorably by a vote of 9-5, with opponents Ellison D. "Cotton Ed" Smith, of S. C., Millard E. Tydings, of Md., Homer T. Bone, of Wash., Rush D. Holt, of W. Va., and Hiram W. Johnson, of Ill., in opposition. Mr. Stimson told the military committee that his appointment was made without any reference to political considerations. Concerning the factors leading up to his acceptance of the cabinet post, Mr. Stimson said that the President had called him by phone at his Chicago law office on 19 June, asking him if he would accept the War post. Mr. Stimson said that at first he demurred, pointing out to the President that he had retired from public life and is 72 years of age. Upon being pressed by the President to accept, he asked for a short time in which to consider the offer and to consult his wife. He said that the President assured him that he could be of assistance to him.

Advocates Compulsory Service

In a prepared statement, which he read at the hearing got under way, Mr. Stimson reiterated his belief in the immediate necessity of compulsory military training and declared that Congress should immediately enact legislation to this end.

Referring to the position of the United States in the world today, he said, "our backs are against the wall." He stated that the time that will be available for the United States to rearm "is largely dependent on continuance of Great Britain's control of the North Atlantic."

Throughout his testimony, Mr. Stimson returned again and again to the armament program, emphasizing that the United States must lose no time and waste no steps in assuring a condition of readiness to meet any eventuality. The committee was particularly concerned over alleged "interventionist" leanings of the nominee, and whether or not President Roosevelt had made any "third term" promises to Mr. Stimson. Mr. Stimson declared that "My sole objective is defense of the United States," and denied that the President had made any declaration of his intentions regarding a third term.

Knox Hearing

Colonel Knox made it perfectly clear to the Naval committee that he has and continues to advocate all help short of war for the Allies. He likewise denied any interventionist views or that the President had made any pledge to him concerning third term possibilities. He said, concerning aid to the Allies, "My position is taken for reasons of selfish security and not done out of love for Great Britain. I am arguing for aid short of war for the British. That might mean British victory, but at any rate it will give us time to prepare." In answer to a query as to how he hopes to speed naval preparedness beyond steps already taken, Colonel Knox told the committee that he has been a newspaper publisher for most of his life and that anyone connected with the newspaper profession who is acquainted with the time element and the necessity of meeting editions and deadlines will understand the methods he proposes to use. The committee questioned him at length on numerous editorials which he has written and sponsored in his paper, the Chicago Daily News. In every instance he stood firmly behind the editorial policy and offered it to the committee as a gauge of his feelings toward preparedness and national policy.

He advocated the strongest naval power in the world, with accompanying industrial capacity, stating that developments are possible that would leave the United States as the lone democracy in a totalitarian world. The committee in order to lay the ghost of interventionist charges, exacted from Colonel Knox a formal statement against participation by the United States in the European war.

The French Fleet

The inevitable result of the capture or destruction of French warships by the British Navy will be to align France with the Axis Powers. Its repercussion will be felt around the world. There are French naval contingents in South American and Asiatic waters. These British ships are seeking and will attack. There are French bases at Saigon and the South Seas. As they would be available for raiders and submarines, the British unquestionably will seek to destroy or blockade them. There are French Colonies off Newfoundland and in and touching upon the Caribbean Sea, and Indo-China and the South Seas. If she does not attempt to capture them, they will be the subject of British attention.

Thus the war has entered upon a new phase. It involves more than ever the question of sea power versus air and land power. Great Britain is heavily preponderant in the matter of surface ships. However, numerous French submarines have escaped, and these will be available for Axis service, for Hitler will now disregard the Armistice pledge that French warships shall not be used for belligerent operations. Likewise available for the same reason will be such ships as have reached French ports. If the Petain Government refuses to permit their use against the British, the Germans will man and operate them.

According to such information as has been received in Washington at the time the ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL goes to press, the following vessels have been captured, sunk or damaged by the British:

Captured—The Lorraine (Bretagne sister ship) at Alexandria; battleships Paris and Courbet (each 12-inch) at Plymouth, Portsmouth or Sheerness in British waters. Cruisers, destroyers, a number of submarines, including Surcouf (2,880 tons, two 8-inch guns), in Alexandria or British home ports, with possibly one training cruiser, one destroyer in Halifax. More than 200 small minesweepers and anti-submarine craft—torpedo boats, patrol vessels, etc.—in British ports; others in Alexandria.

Sunk or damaged—battleship Bretagne (ten 13.4-inch guns) sunk off Oran; Provence, sister ship of Bretagne, badly damaged; one of France's two new battleships, most likely the Dunkerque (eight 13-inch guns) damaged; Commandant Teste, seaplane tender; destroyer Mogador among others sunk.

Service Income Tax

Following is an unofficial computation of the application of the new income tax bill to service pay. In the following table tax is figured for the base pay of the grade indicated. Longevity increases, as they vary with the individual, must be added, as must travel allowances. In the following table, except in the grades of first and second lieutenants and warrant officers, the tax is computed on the basis of a married officer with no children.

	Tax
2nd Lt. (first pay period)	$1,500 $24.20*
1st Lt. (second pay period)	2,000 44.00*
Capt. (third pay period)	2,400 7.04
Maj. (fourth pay period)	3,000 30.80
Lt. Col. (fifth pay period)	3,500 50.00
Col. (sixth pay period)	4,000 70.40
Brigadier General	6,000 149.60
Major General	8,000 316.80
Warrant Officer (Army)	1,776 29.70*

*Single.

(Rental and subsistence allowances are not taxable, but additions to base pay for longevity and travel allowances are.)

Tax is computed by deducting exemption from net income, deducting earned income credit (10 per cent of net income) from that figure, and computing tax at 4 per cent, plus any surtaxes payable. To amount of tax to be paid, add 10 per cent as national defense tax.

FINANCE

Financial Digest

Business is now turning to the Democratic Convention in Chicago to ascertain from the character of the nominee platform what it may expect in case of democratic victory in November. From the Republican Party there has come in its candidate and platform, definite assurances of help, and the facilitation of cooperation with the Federal Government. It is to be expected the Democratic Convention will approve the policies of President Roosevelt. This means that it will oppose modifications of the Wagner Labor Relations Act. The Republican platform declared such modifications are necessary. It will approve the conduct of Administration Agencies, which have placed heavy curbs on business. The Republican Platform promises to reduce to the minimum Federal competition with business. It will justify its monetary policies. The Republican platform declares that Congress should reclaim its constitutional power over money, and reintroduce gold into circulation. It will uphold the Securities Act. The Republican Platform argues that this Act should be revised in order to encourage the flow of private capital into industry. It will justify the policy of deficit spending and the heavy taxes that have been imposed. The Republican Platform declares its Party if successful will revise the tax system and remove practices which impede recovery. Only in the matter of National Defense and expenditures therefore will the two Parties be in agreement.

Thus, there will be clear cut issues on business which the people will be called upon to pass in the election in November.

The need of spending for National Defense will mean that to an already inflated budget, the Government will add some three or four billions a year. For six years, Federal expenditures have been maintained at the seven or eight billion level. Now they will advance to the ten or twelve billion dollar level. An official statement of the Treasury Department reported that for the last fiscal year there was spent $9,006,085,539, and it is estimated for the current year there will be spent more than $11,000,000,000. The deficit expected next year will be $3,741,249,136. This will be the tenth deficit in a row. The total deficits for the ten years of the thirties be above 26 billion dollars, or about the addition to the National Debt.

The period of deficits must be divided into two phases, the first under Mr. Hoover, who pursued orthodox policies and sought to balance the budget, and the second under Mr. Roosevelt, who endeavored by priming the pump to restore prosperity. Because of National Defense needs, deficit spending must continue. In order to reduce the deficit for the current year, the President has proposed a steeply graded excess profits tax as a supplement to the revenue bill he has just approved. Congress, with an eye on the November election, is hesitant about adding to the taxpayer burden, and it will be some weeks, if at all, before this new recommendation is approved. One of the designs of the President is to prevent profiteering and the development of war millionaires. While this is regarded as laudable there is a growing disposition in Congress to make a thorough tax revision. This cannot be done effectively until the next session.

Merchant Marine

Two vital mercantile bills became law this week when President Roosevelt approved Senate Joint Resolution 260 providing assistance to ship operators affected by the Neutrality Act, and signed the War Risk Insurance Bill which puts the government in the marine insurance field to fill the gap caused by curtailment of Lloyd's services.

Take Over State Schools

Acting in accordance with terms of Reorganization Plan No. 4, the Maritime Commission this week assumed the Navy Department's responsibility for maintaining and supervising the State nautical schools of California, Massachusetts, New York and Pennsylvania. Responsibility includes that of furnishing government vessels and equipment and matching State contributions, up to $25,000 for each school.

The Navy will continue to lend ordnance and other equipment, and as in the past, retired Navy officers will be appointed superintendents of the schools.

However, the Maritime Commission favors provision by which eligible young men from any State may be admitted to the schools. At present Pennsylvania and Massachusetts restrict enrollment to residents, and California and New York charge out-of-State residents higher fees. The commission plans to integrate the four schools with its own system of training cadets on merchant marine vessels to become officers.

Establish Sixth Station

Another training station for apprentice seamen was established by the Maritime Commission this week, at Hueneme, near Oxnard, Calif. Similar stations have been established at St. Petersburg, Fla., and Gallup's Island, Mass. The Maritime Service also has stations at Government Island, Hoffman Island and New London.

The station is part of the Coast Guard reservation and will have a capacity of 250 trainees with a staff of 50. It will be ready for occupancy by January, 1941.

A new training ship, the American Sailor (ex-Edgemont) will be attached to the station.

Sea Arrow to Navy

The C-3 cargo ship Sea Arrow was delivered to the Navy Department 3 July at the plant of the Moore Drydock Company, Oakland, Calif. The Sea Arrow will be converted to a seaplane tender. The C-3 vessels are the largest and fastest of the government's new cargo ships, having designed speed of 16½ knots, but developing more than 18 knots.

America Accepted, But—

The SS America, queen of the American merchant marine, was delivered by Newport News SB & DD Company to United States Lines this week. The vessel on her trial runs far exceeded expectations, but it was found necessary to add 15 feet to the height of her streamlined funnels to reduce soot formation.

The America is to be placed in the West Indian and Caribbean cruise service, pending ending of Europe hostilities.

Cadets to Transports

A total of 28 deck and engineer cadets have been assigned to seven Army transports, it was learned this week. Two deck and two engineer cadets each are being placed aboard each passenger transport.

MERCHANT MARINE

Ask Bids on 3 More Ships

Bids have been invited, for opening July, on three steam C-3 passenger cargo vessels for American South Atlantic Lines. The vessels will have accommodations for 111 passengers.

Manning Scale Hearings

Public hearings to determine minimum manning scales for subsidized vessels of the American merchant marine will be held in San Francisco, New Orleans and New York this month.

New MC Nominations

The names of the following civilians were submitted to the Senate on 3 July for confirmation as second lieutenants in the United States Marine Corps, rank from 25 June, 1940:

U. S. COAST GUARD

REAR Adm. Russell R. Waesche, Commandant of the Coast Guard, this week enunciated a three point program, for which the approval of the Budget and Congress will be sought at the earliest possible date. Primarily, the Commandant stated, the question is one of providing adequate, modern training facilities for incoming enlisted personnel. Admiral Waesche reviewed the present stations and declared that most of them are antiquated cast-offs, in many instances fire and health hazards. He pointed out that the Coast Guard has been and is being greatly expanded and declared that it is essential that two large, modern training stations be provided. One of these, the Admiral stated, should be located on the east coast and the other on the west coast. They should be constructed, he said, on the basis of a long-range analysis of the needs of the service. Such a training setup would provide a much better coordinated program, with attendant flexibility in assigning men to stations and ships.

The second point on the Commandant's program is an expansion and over-haul of the Coast Guard's repair facilities at the Curtis Bay Depot. He stated that a floating drydock should be provided at the Depot, with accompanying handling facilities. The shops at the Depot, he said, are in good shape and turn out excellent work. Admiral Waesche said that the dock is especially necessary in light of the fact that commercial and Navy Yards are loaded to the top with construction and repair work and will probably be in that condition for some time to come.

The third point now being sought is funds for the construction of three 327 foot cutters which have been authorized by Congress. At the same time, Admiral Waesche said, he feels that inauguration of work on the Kodiak, Alaska, air base should not be delayed. He said that the new national defense theory makes it essential that Alaskan waters be patrolled thoroughly at all times. The need for the cutters is being felt more and more because of expanded Coast Guard duties. He said that the weather patrol and neutrality work have drawn heavily on the vessels needed for the normal peace-time functions of the service. All of these above projects are being whipped into shape for presentation to the Bureau of the Budget. Whether or not they will be included in the President's new national defense budget, to be submitted to Congress next week, is not known.

Coast Guard Lay-ups

Headquarters is now preparing schedules for the lay-up of Coast Guard vessels for fitting-out with under-water sound devices, depth charge racks, additional guns and other features provided for in the recently enacted First Supplemental Appropriation bill. It was stated that these lay-ups will average from three to six weeks.

Port Captains

In a drastic and sweeping move, the President has lodged with the Coast Guard the authority to govern all shipping in harbors of the United States and to control the handling and loading of explosives and other dangerous cargo.

By executive order, the President designated the Treasury Department to take over the above duties, centralizing a control that had been vested in several agencies of the government.

In line with the President's action, the Secretary of the Treasury named Assistant Secretary Herbert E. Gaston to head the new office, which has been designated the Office of Merchant Ship Movements. Three Coast Guard officers have been assigned to the new office, Comdr. W. N. Derby, Lt. Comdr. A. C. Richmond and Lt. F. E. Pollio.

The following Coast Guard officers have been named captains of the ports indicated, as additional duty, to enforce the law:

Capt. W. H. Munter, Seattle, Wash.
 Capt. C. M. Gabbett, Jacksonville, Fla.
 Capt. J. L. Ahern, New Orleans, La.
 Capt. T. A. Shanley, Boston, Mass.
 Capt. W. A. Bonham, Cleveland, Ohio.
 Comdr. G. T. Finlay, Honolulu, T. H.
 Comdr. G. W. MacLane, Chicago, Ill.
 Comdr. L. E. Wells, Philadelphia, Pa., and all ports below to and including Lewes, Del.
 Comdr. W. H. Barton, San Juan, P. R.
 Lt. Comdr. H. E. Grogan, Port Everglades, Fla.
 Lt. Comdr. C. H. Hilton, Key West, Fla.
 Lt. K. P. Maley, Miami, Fla.
 Lt. W. C. Capron, Baltimore, Md. (temp. det. Calypso).
 Lt. C. G. Bowman, San Diego, Calif.
 Lt. H. A. Meyer, Detroit, Mich.
 Lt. Thomas Sampson, Portland, Me.
 Ch. Bosn. Marins Peterson, Mobile, Ala.
 Ch. Bosn. (L) T. G. Deegan, Duluth, Minn., and Superior, Wis.

They will total more than five billion dollars.

It is understood that the new estimates carry forward the armament program for the Army to a point where provision is made for the most important essential items for the Protective Mobilization Plan force of 750,000 enlisted men and the critical items of equipment for an Army of 2,000,000 men. It is recalled that appropriations thus far provide essential, or commercial items, only for the existing Regular Army and National Guard, and critical items of equipment for the Protective Mobilization Plan Force of 750,000 men.

—Denver Post

Time Marches On!

Since the inception of The March of Time in 1934, its Editors have enjoyed the confidence and cooperation of officers and men of the U. S. armed forces.

March of Time's cameras have been permitted to go where no cameras have ever gone before—into the bomb bay of a flying fortress, the torpedo room of a submarine, the conning tower and turrets of a dreadnaught.

Because of the official cooperation given to its directors and cameramen, The March of Time has been able to tell the U. S. public about the nation's arms and armaments. In a series of presentations released during the past months The March of Time has given U. S. citizens a new insight into the life and living of the men whose job is to defend America.

Each issue of The March of Time is shown at U. S. Army posts, aboard U. S. naval vessels and in more than 8,000 theatres throughout the country, to an audience estimated at 30,000,000.

THIS WEEK the Editors of The March of Time announce the completion of their first full-length production.

"THE RAMPARTS WE WATCH"

It is a new kind of motion picture... an enlightening presentation of the direction of America's destiny. Its story recreates, as it really was, the one great period in American history which most affects this nation today—the period of 1914-18, when America met one of her most fearful crises.

It is appropriate that this film should have been completed just at this time, when everyone, old and young, is talking once more of American unity and American armaments and the responsibility of democracy.

We hope that from THE RAMPARTS WE WATCH the American people may gather something—perhaps much—that shall strengthen and sustain their convictions, their faith, and their hopes during the perilous and trying days ahead.
